

Middlewich Heritage Website

Cookies And Privacy Policy

First, a brief explanation of what a cookie is.

Put simply, a cookie is a small text file which is stored on your computer or other web enabled device so that the website can remember some information about your browsing activity on the website.

A cookie can be used to hold information relating to your use of a website, some examples are:

- information about your device such as it's IP address and browser type,
- demographic data,
- the URL a link that opened the website you are visiting,
- your online preferences.

The simplicity of such a small text file means that cookies can have many uses and are sometimes essential for the proper functioning of a website; this is often the case with online shops and other interactive websites.

How does the Middlewich Heritage website use personal data?

The only personal data held by the Middlewich Heritage Website relates to essential retention of Administrators, Authors, Editors and Publishers names, passwords and contact details as these are necessary for the proper functioning of the website.

How does the Middlewich Heritage website use cookies?

The Middlewich Heritage website does not directly use any cookies however it does make use of some embedded third party elements which may do, these are:

- YouTube
 - To enable us to use video recordings from various sources we embed video recordings served from the YouTube website. As YouTube is provided by Google we do not have any control over Google's use of cookies or their privacy policy, however Google does publish it's Privacy Policy and you may read it at http://www.google.com/intl/en_uk/policies/privacy/ .

Privacy

The Middlewich Heritage website itself does not collect personal data from it's visitors nor does it set any cookies.

Middlewich Heritage/IPJnet Web Developments
Last Updated 19th December 2012